Bargain Friday Facts-Not Furbelows

When it comes to the business of reading what now is commonly called "store news," are you interested in the rhetorical frills of theory regarding what a store should be to be "ideal," or does plain, solid fact about the store's doings from day to day suit you best? Are you interested in the store theoretically, or practically? Is it the store or the store's merchandise of which you seek information (allowing that in the store's workings, its management, systems, etc., efficient, careful, accurate, quick service is given you)?

We could give you furbelows if we thought you wished them, for there is no store striving harder for the ideal than Bloomingdale's. But we think you rather hear of results than efforts, and so we place results before you in plain, tangible form daily, letting you divine, if you wish, from them what our efforts to gain such results

These columns of Bargain Friday Specials are an instance of this. Each statement is a plain, solid fact, void of hyperbole, but intensely interesting to every one who holds the saving of money as of any consequence.
